

- I am going to lead a weekly singing for pleasure group (3:15-4:15pm Wednesdays) from now until Christmas and then review whether to continue (presumably based on the average number attending each week).
- Each session will begin with vocal warm ups, as is typical of any professionally run singing session - to warm up the vocal chords and upper body.
- As advertised, we will then sing a number of songs, from a range of genres. This will be largely unison singing with some simple part singing where appropriate.
- Words to songs will be provided. I will lead the session from the front and there will also be an accompanist.
- There will be a very small teaching element to enhance the singing experience (e.g. varying dynamics/tempo changes etc).
- People are more than welcome to suggest musical items for inclusion in the sessions and I will be very happy to consider these. (The suggestion was made today that we could sing one or two WW1 songs, and we will certainly include these next week.)
